RE: Central States Water the magazine, Report
Date: May 12, 2007

The first issue of Central States Water was delivered in April and the quality of the publication exceeded our expectations and was well received by our members. The publisher, Craig Kelman & Associates and the Managing Editor Cheryl Parisien did an outstanding job of arraigning the content and feature articles. Advertising sales manager Al Whalen brought in a lot of advertisers, many national firms that had previously not been in WISILLMINN.

The next issue of Central States Water will be distributed in July and the deadline for submissions is June 1, 2007. With the wrap up of the 80th Annual Meeting being one of the main themes, along with message from the new President and Section Chairs, it will be important that all articles are received as soon as possible following the Annual Meeting.

Items to be included in the July issue will be a summary of the Radebaugh Award winning paper from the 79th Annual Meeting, the Stockholm Junior Water Prize winner's project winners a report on the YP Summit and coverage of other S&YP activities. A feature article will be on the impact of Pharmaceuticals pass through and whether any threat exists in receiving waters.

It will be a very full issue and it may become necessary to trim some articles and defer others to future editions.

All submissions should be forwarded to me for review prior to submission to our Managing Editor at Craig Kelman and Associates.
